The London Advertiser contains an article with the title, "The Wickedness of Large Dividends." This is generally considered hereabouts as a very good thing, but just now our people are more concerned with the dividends of small dividends.

Ninety-three million four hundred and eighty thousand, nine hundred and forty-seven dollars were deposited in New York city savings banks last year, an increase of ten millions on the previous year.

In a case tried last week at Madison, Indiana, a woman, charged with the larceny of another woman's clothes, was discharged on the ground that the indictment should have alleged the property belonging to the woman's husband.

The British and Foreign Bible Society has at last received permission to sell the Bible in Roman Catholic countries for the use of Catholics. It has been refused in Warsaw. On the first day 1016 copies were sold, and during the first week the purchases amounted to 8,172.

The Richmond Dispatch informs us that General Sherman also has been designated to issue some work of a stay law. General Orders No. 10, Headquarters Military District No. 2, appear to be one of the most popular publications that have lately emanated from the press.

The Montgomery Advertiser of the 28th has an editorial hinting strongly that the people of that section would not be much displeased if General Grant should be proper to enact the same stay law in Alabama which General Sherman promulgated in his Order No. 10.

A Bill incorporating the Pneumatic Dispatch Company is now before the Massachusetts Legislature. The company proposes to construct first a tube from Boston to Roxbury. The plan contemplates a railroad track enclosed in a tube, on which cars will be placed.

A magnificent Russian chapel was recently erected in the city of Geneva. It is twenty miles in length, and is a distance of twenty miles from the city of Geneva. The dedication ceremonies were very imposing. All the Protestant pastors in the city were present.

The Protestant Church was without a representative. A tornado passed over the northern part of New Jersey on Monday afternoon. The track was half a mile wide. It was chiefly destructive at Newton, Sussex County, where barns and out-houses were torn from their foundations and much property destroyed.

The statement has gone the rounds of the papers that the last three months, five hundred men in full armor, belonging to the elite High School of Artillery, have given up their careers, and have been received into the British Army.

The government has not yet become acquainted with the object of the visit to this country of the Japanese Imperial Commissioners. Although they will soon arrive in Washington, it is not expected they will be presented to the President until early next week, when the Secretary of State will receive them at Auburn.

The city of Newburyport has a self-propelling steam fire engine, called the "Eon," which the  Herald of that city says is moved about the streets, up hill and down, through snow or mud, "as easily as a wheelbarrow." Several officers of the Boston fire department have seen the engine travel, and pronounce it a decided success.

The floods in the West are the highest in the last eighteen years. The cost of freight have been detained for several days. The case of the family of the late EARL RIVERS, (who has just died at the age of seven), is cited as illustrative of the hardships of the law of entail. The father of the late EARL, fearing that his son was not likely to live, would have out of the entail for the sake of the numerous family of daughters; but the son, being under age, could not give his consent to the step; and thus, without being a man, with a magnificent estate, has died without being able to make any provision for his sisters.

LARGEST CIRCULATION.—The DAILY NEWS publishes the Official List of Letters remaining in the Postoffice at the end of each week, agreeably to the following section of the New Postoffice Law, as the newspaper having the largest circulation in the City of Charleston.

Section 6, and it is further enacted, That lists of letters remaining unclaimed for in any Postoffice in any city, town or village, where a newspaper shall be printed, shall hereafter be published once only in the newspaper which, being published weekly or oftener, shall have the largest circulation within range of delivery of the said office.

As communications intended for publication in this journal must be addressed to the Editor of the Daily News, No. 18 Hayne-street, Charleston, S. C. Business communications to Publisher of Daily News. We cannot undertake to return rejected communications.

Advertisements outside of the city must be accompanied with the cash. CHARLESTON. WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 1, 1867.

PAY UP. We are sending out at present, a great number of bills for subscription and advertising, and most earnestly request that all those who may receive them, will have the kindness to make prompt remittances. A great many of these accounts have been standing for a year and more, and it is absolutely necessary now that they should be paid.

REGISTRATION. We publish this morning a letter from Hon. A. C. GARLINGTON, of Newberry, which we commend to general attention. General GARLINGTON has been for many years one of the most distinguished members of the Legislature, and was, during the latter years of the war, Adjutant-General of the State. He has always belonged to the extreme State Rights wing of the Democratic party, and his personal character, as well as his position, give great weight to his opinions, and so clearly expressed.

This letter, together with the almost unanimous expression of opinion by the local press of the State, indicate very plainly that the people of the State intend to execute the provisions of the Reconstruction Act, and do what lies in their power to put an end to all further political agitation. We think that who are so inclined to influence public opinion can now safely turn their attention from the discussion of this policy, to the practical means carrying it into effect.

It cannot be very long before the necessary orders for the regulation of the registration are issued, and the two points to which we hope public attention will now be speedily directed will be, 1. A full and clear explanation of the character of the disability imposed by the Constitutional Amendment, so that every citizen of the State will be made to understand whether he is disfranchised, and if not, that his duty requires the conscientious exercise of his right of suffrage, which, more than ever, is today a trust in his hands for the protection of the State.

2. A systematic method, in every district of the State, by which the obligation to register shall be brought home to every voter in the State.

If we really think that the interest of the State requires her citizens to register and vote, then all available means should be used to secure the registration of every voter who is entitled under the act to the privilege of suffrage.

We know that in the present temper of our people and the pressure upon them of the every day business of life, there is little time and less spirit for the discharge of public duty. But never was there a time when the interest of the State and, indeed, the merely selfish interest of every man of property and character in the State, demanded so imperatively all necessary sacrifice of time and comfort to the discharge of a momentous public duty.

It is generally understood that, before long, the Attorney-General of the United States will publish an official opinion as to the extent and character of the disabling clauses of the Reconstruction Act. When that is known we will return to the subject, but, in the meantime, we hope that, throughout the State, the proper steps will be taken to organize the necessary means by which a full and honest registration of all the voters of the State will be secured.

LUXEMBURG. The Luxembourg question has assumed a somewhat different phase, since we last passed it under review. The "co-singularities" of the treaty of 1839, which gave the Grand Duchy its present status, have made a proposition to Prussia and to France, which, it is understood, is to be received as a basis of settlement. The conference will shortly meet in London; and both France and Prussia, if we may credit the Atlantic Cable, have signified their acquiescence in such a Convention. It is, of course, impossible to say, beforehand, what the result of this Conference may be; but it is generally admitted, that the fortress, one of the strongest in Europe, is to be dismantled, and that the Grand Duchy is to remain independent and neutral. Such a Convention would be an excellent omen for the political sorrows of Emperor Napoleon; but it will not be received with the same equanimity by Prussia. The fortress of Luxembourg has been long garrisoned by Prussia, and is, at this time, occupied by her soldiers. To evacuate it at the dictation of the great powers, will be a source of considerable humiliation to a military people, flushed with recent victory, and tenacious to the last degree of holding every inch of German territory. Moreover, this same fortress of Luxembourg has for years been deemed vital as a bulwark to Germany against France. Its proposed neutrality cannot meet the exigencies of the case. An armed neutrality may offer a barrier of the kind here needed. But the small province of Luxembourg, the appanage of a third-rate monarch, situated between two powerful contending nations, will present no lasting obstacle to either the one or the other of the two parties coveting the strip of land on the left bank of the Moselle. Switzerland, it is true, for many centuries, has occupied such intervening neutral ground, and Italy, Austria and France, have all along respected her territorial integrity. But Switzerland is much larger than Luxembourg, and has always boasted a warlike population; and much of her immunity is due to the accident of the physical configuration of her territory. Nature has planted fortresses there stronger than any built by VAUBAN. Luxembourg is situated in a plain, and the fortress removed, would hold out an inducement to the French at any time to cross the frontier and make an excursion to the lower Rhine.

It may be said that France has the same reason to object to leaving the frontier unguarded. But this is not really the case. The French, it is known, have long desired to extend their boundary in that direction, and would embrace the earliest opportunity of annexing not only all the German Rhine provinces, but the whole of Belgium besides; whereas the Germans have no desire to invade other lands, and only desire a consolidation or unification of their own territory.

We therefore are not inclined to believe that Prussia will consent to such an arrangement. True, it is possible, that in order to avert a great European war the Powers represented at the Conference in London may form such a coalition against her as to compel her to give up her design and evacuate Luxembourg, though we cannot think that such a step will be taken. It has been said, that in case Prussia refused to acquiesce in the determination of the Conference Austria will at once join France. This is the theory of French journals. But here, as usual, there is reason to suspect that the wish is father to the thought. But granting that such an alliance is in reserve, there is equal authority for stating that if such an arrangement go into operation Russia will be found by the side of Germany.

We have been reading the French papers carefully of late, and they are unanimous in their opinion of the German people; evidently much surprised to find such wide-spread, unusual gallophobia in every part of Germany. NAPOLION counted much on the dissatisfaction he expected to find in the Southern States of Germany, which had all been punished last year by Prussia. But there is not a sign of it apparent. In Munich as in Berlin, in Stuttgart, Darmstadt and Dresden, as in Breslau, Halle, or Coblenz—there is but one voice in all Germany on this question: Luxembourg belongs to Germany, and must not be surrendered.

Prussia is in the hands of able statesmen and thorough soldiers, men who feel their strength, and likewise know how to take advantage of circumstances. Prussia is prepared for war. France, it is generally understood, is not. And, minding even that the French people are throwing alive to the fact that they have lost prestige, and must fight to regain it, there is in this no such dependence as has Count DISMAREK, when he calls upon the patriotism of the whole German nation, to keep the foreign invader from her sacred soil, to defend one of her outlying smaller States, threatened by a powerful and covetous neighbor. We will venture no further speculations at this time, as a few days may bring us the issue of the conference.
